Summary of the Activity

<Aims>

To give the participants an opportunity to think about their future jobs in the international fields.

<Contents>

- Symposium

-We invited 4 speakers working in the international fields and listened to them.

• Free talk Session

-In this session, we took a round table style. Participants talked with speakers for 15 minutes per each.

<Results>

We could get 16 participants.

It was meaningful for the students who are interested in international fields to think about their future.

Part A: Planning

Organising Team	4 Individuals
Who were involved?	Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences Students, Pharmacists

Aims of the Activity

It was aimed to give the participants some clue to decide what kind of job they want to have in the future from the lectures of the symposists who have lots of experiences in the international fields. We also aimed to let them know what they should do now in order to work in the international fields in the future because it seemed that some students did not know it though they liked foreign countries and they were willing to work with foreign people.

Results/Outcomes of the Activity

We could get 16 participants.

Everything was done as we scheduled.

Participants could talk with symposists a lot, and they could ask anything they wanted to.

Evaluation of the Activity

We should have more time for the venue-setting if we get more participants. We were barely in time.

What should be avoided or carefully prevented:

Nothing

Final remarks

APS-Japan has some students who are interested in the international fields. They seem that they have some questions or concerns such as "How can I combine my interest in foreign countries with job?", "Which level of English skill is required in the companies with capital?", and "What should I do in order to work abroad?". That's why we organized this event this time.

What we learned from the lectures are that English is just a tool. Most of the students seemed to feel that it is their goal to master English. However, from symposists, we could learn that we can not do anything without the knowledge about medicine and treatment as pharmacists, and we need to keep on studying pharmacy in addition to English.

Some participants said that they could have new dreams and other ones said that they could realize what they need to do now. It is great for us that all participants could learn many things from this event.
